What to expect

Under the dark sky, at an elevation of 2.500 meters, we start the ascent guided by the promise of the spectacular sunrise awaiting us at the summit of Veleta at 3.392 meters, the second-highest peak of the Sierra Nevada.

As we crest the final ridge, the first hints of light emerge on the horizon, painting the sky in beautiful twilight colors of yellowish-red.

Finally, atop the peak, we are greeted by the sunrise, a special moment of contemplation. After, we begin our descent retracing our steps along the trail we climbed. Let's step inside the mountain refuge for a fresh coffee and breakfast.
